

I believe that the telephone privacy act should not be diminished from the Indiana law. The number of harassing phone calls has stopped in our household. It has allowed us to have family time together without interruptions. The American family is almost extinct because of the sanctioning of the gov't. The gov't wants to take away the small things in life that make it precious. The telephone privacy act has made it possible for families to enjoy time together without the annoyance of unwanted telephone calls. Please keep this on the law books, if not for the current generation, but for those that thrive from what they learn from us.
